

A NOTE ON BUYING

Clear first, buy second

Spring is the one season where the first move costs nothing: take things away. Most rooms improve more from a Saturday of removal than from anything on this list. Only once the surfaces are clear and the heavy layers are up should a single new thing come in — and then only the one the cleared room is asking for.

So read this edit as a sequence, not a haul. The baskets that make the clear-out possible. The linen that lets the light in. The one vase that holds the season. The rest can wait for the room to ask.

"The best thing you'll do for the room this season, you'll do with your hands and a bin bag."
