

A SECOND LOOK

The bedroom, undressed

The summer bedroom is a subtraction too. Strip the bed back to one washed-linen layer — no quilt, no throw — in oat or the palest stone. Pull the heavy curtain and hang a sheer in its place so the early light comes in soft and you wake with it. Clear the nightstand to a single lamp, a glass of water, one book.

Linen is the whole technology of the season: it breathes, it wicks, it cools as cotton cannot, and it looks better creased than pressed — wabi in a fitted sheet. Buy it once, in a pale tone, and let it soften over years. It is the rare upgrade you feel every single night.

Stonewashed linen pillowcases

Pale, pre-softened — the cool surface against the cheek.

$ SHOP →

Simple&Opulence linen duvet cover

The one summer layer. Breathes, wicks, softens with every wash.

$$ SHOP →