

A NOTE ON BUYING

Cool is mostly free

Almost everything that makes a room feel cooler costs nothing: the door left open, the heavy layer stored, the surface cleared, the rug rolled away. The few things worth buying are the ones you'll feel every day for years — linen you sleep on, a jug you pour from, a single low lamp for when the light finally goes.

So treat this edit as the short list it is. One linen upgrade, one good vessel, one warm evening light. The rest of summer's comfort you already own; you just have to take some of it away.

"The coolest thing you'll do for the room this season is open a door and close a cupboard."
