

THE EDIT

Fifteen for the turn

For the season of gathering in. Grouped the way an autumn home is warmed — the wool back down, the light brought low, the table laid for a few, the season's stems preserved. Each is one we'd own; the link earns a small commission, the choice earns your trust.

Bring the warmth back slowly. A gathered room is built in layers, not bought in a haul.
